

SINGING ANGELS. Started 40 years ago by Bill Boehm to steer area youth toward an appreciation of music other than rock 'n' roll, Northeast Ohio's world-renowned youth chorus has provided hundreds of youngsters the opportunity to pursue careers in music. Last Sunday's anniversary performance at the Allen Theatre was a fitting tribute.

schools need teachers who make a difference," and they are tough to replace. Good luck.

THE BROWNS. During a topsy-turvy off season in which coach Belk Davis — much to the chagrin of local pundits — moved close to the title of Emperor, not many can argue with the signing of Dennis Northcut to a fat contract. The playmaking receiver had earlier vowed never to play for the Brownies, but was convinced to change his mind. Good move.

NESSLER STREET FAIR. Organizers of this annual University Circle festival chose to use this year's event — the 33rd annual get-together — to honor the late poet and activist Daniel Thompson. Pictures of him were being sold, with proceeds going to pay for a headstone for Thompson, who died earlier this month at the age of 69.
